Critical Point Ahead!

S&P 500

The above S&P 500 chart shows that the current Landscheit Cycle began on May 5th. It will run either 66 days or 56 days depending on what harmonic decides to manifest itself.

The lower pane of the above chart shows the Hurst cycles that I have determined using the built-in function in the Optuma program. The current rally (is it a bear market rally?) started at May 24 which was a Hurst 51 day repetitive cyclic interval (curiously enough the day before this interval saw an intra-day reversal that caught people's attention).

I am focused on the two intervals that will manifest on June 2 (a 252 day and a 27 day interval). There is then a 78 day cyclic interval that will manifest at June 8-9. What happens at these Hurst intervals will tell the tale for the near term market trend.

Adding to the situation is the New Moon event that will come on May 30 with Sun at 9 Gemini. Mars will pass through 0 degrees of declination at the same time as the New Moon is occurring. June 2 will mark the end of the current Mercury retrograde event. June 2 will also mark Moon passing that always critical 14 of Cancer point.

So – plenty of cosmic activity as well as Hurst cycle activity.

Nasdaq

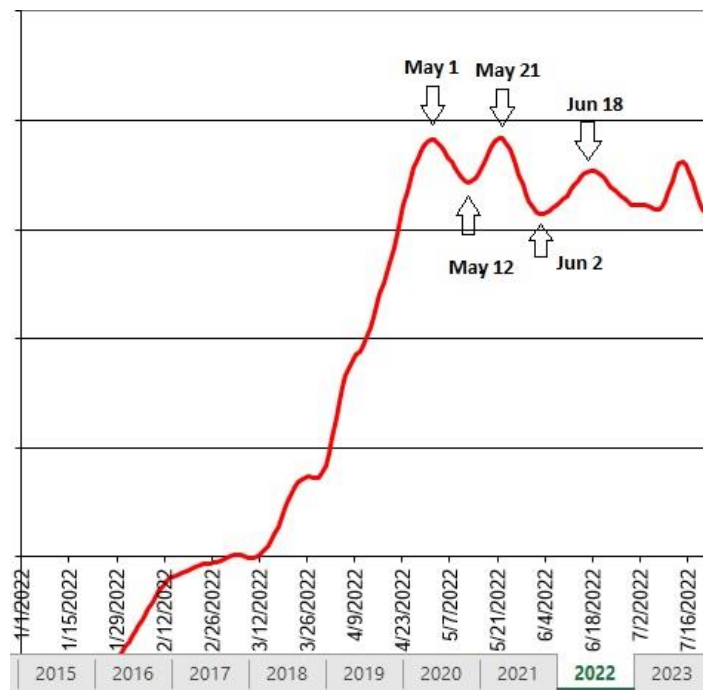

The above chart shows price activity on Nasdaq. There is a 78 day dominant Hurst cycle that currently is visible on Nasdaq. Curiously enough, if one goes back to late December, 2021 the peak on Nasdaq came at a 78 day Hurst interval. An interim low appeared in mid-March at a 78 day interval. Now, we have a 78 day interval that will appear on June 2. Plus we will have a New Moon, Mars at zero declination, Mercury retrograde ending. This all causes me to wonder if the current bit of market strength is just a bear market bounce that will give way again on June 2.

This is a critical time...

Bradley Model

It has been a while since I have updated you on the Bradley Model. For recent subscribers, the Bradley Model was developed in 1946 by a financial astrologer who identified himself as Donald Bradley (his real name was Garth Allan). The model is based on a very lengthy formula that considers the separation on each day of the various pairs of planets. Plus the model includes a day by day average of the declination of Mars and Venus. The plot that you see on this page illustrates that we are now in some sort of a sideways pattern of ups and downs. I have marked on this plot some of the dates that align to these inflection points. At the bottom of the page is an S&P 500 chart with these Bradley dates overlaid.

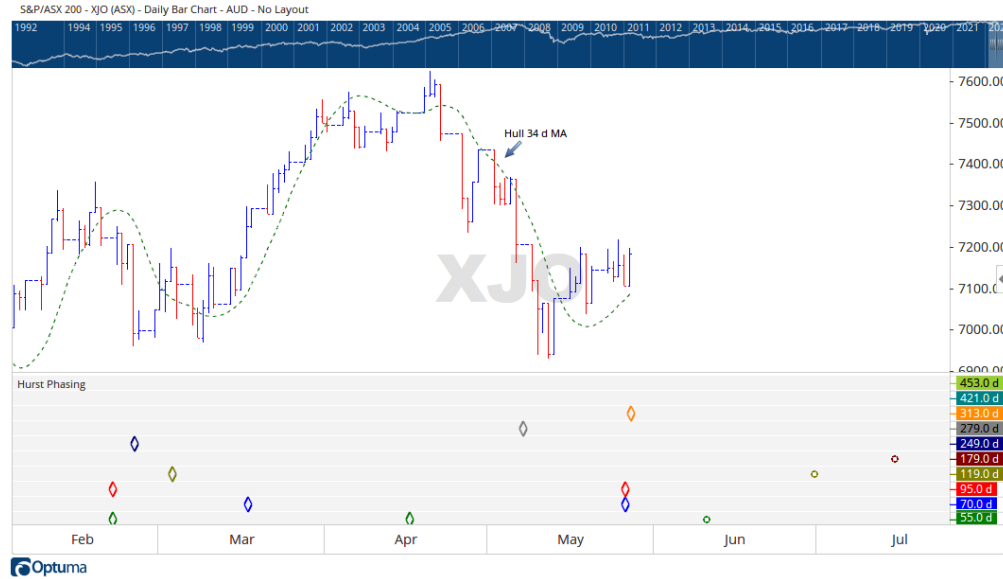

Now that the Fed is out of the way with its liquidity injections, astrology is once again working and the Bradley Model is also functioning.

The following chart shows the ASX 200 with Hurst cycles. There are 3 Hurst intervals (313,95, and 55 day) that are currently manifesting. Watch closely with the New Moon arriving and Mercury retrograde ending.

Gold

As discussed in the 2022 Almanac, there are two key historical dates that affect Gold, namely the September 1919 date when the London Gold fix came into being and the December 1974 date when Gold futures started trading in New York.

In the Almanac I talk about Venus transiting passing points in the 1919 horoscope. We have just finished seeing Venus transit past the 1919 natal Moon location (18 Aries). The May 16th low on Gold prices aligns spot-on to this exact aspect. The month of August will see Venus transit past 3 planetary locations in the 1919 horoscope. Watch for significant Gold price action in August. Hopefully this action manifests as higher prices.

As for the 1974 natal horoscope, in late July, Venus will pass the 1974 natal Saturn point. In mid-August, Venus will pass the 1974 natal Moon location. This is further evidence that as we head into August, there will be volatility on Gold prices.

Meantime, there is a fairly decent correlation between Gold price and both Moon and Mars being at 0 degrees declination. This correlation arises because in 1919 at the time of the Gold fix creation, Moon and Mars were near 0 declination.

There is a 0 declination event coming on June 2. Add this event to the foregoing discussion about Hurst cycles and S&P and Nasdaq. This is a critical time....

As for actual price action, I see solid support for Gold at the 4th harmonics of Jupiter, Neptune, and Pluto Quantum Lines in or near $1760 to $1793 per ounce.

Oil

Inventory levels of diesel fuel and refined gasoline remain lower than 12 month-ago levels. Meantime in a failed effort to lower gas prices at the pump, oil was taken from the Strategic Reserve. Current inventory in the reserve is 532 million barrels versus 632 million barrels 12 months ago. Clearly, Mr. Biden was serious when he said the reserve would be tapped in an aggressive way. To add to the situation, pressure from large portfolio investors for oil companies to be better stewards of the environment has reduced the amount of drilling that is going on. Here in Canada, most Oil companies are drilling to maintain production levels. They are not drilling to ramp up output.

Bottom line – the world is now sitting with about 2% surplus Oil in the system. Prices are going to remain robust. The pain you feel at the petrol station will only get worse.

The current bit of strength in oil price was triggered by a Hurst 222 day cyclic interval. There are no more cyclical points visible until July.

As discussed in the 2022 Almanac, the 1983 natal horoscope of Oil futures has a peculiar rectangle shape embedded in it. As transiting Sun or Mars touches these corner points, there can often be a price response. The above chart shows the response in April as Sun passed the 1983 Mars rectangle point. Mercury retrograde also can spur price responses. The above chart shows that the current Mercury retrograde event has stimulated price. Watch for an Oil price reaction as Mercury retrograde ends.

After Mercury retrograde ends, focus on the time around June 7 when Sun will pass the 1983 Node point of the rectangle. Look for a price response on Oil futures.

Lastly, in 1983 when Oil started trading in New York, Moon was within 5 degrees of being at 0 declination. On the above chart, the lower pane depicts Moon declination. Note how there are price reactions as Moon gets very near to 0 declination.
